IranConMin – the positive trend continues

After most of the economic sanctions imposed on Iran were lifted in January 2016, the trade show saw a 50 per cent increase in exhibitor figures last year. This positive trend kept up in 2017 since many foreign companies want to make the most of the opportunity to become established in the growth market of Iran. The country is in considerable need of modernization and there are large-scale construction and infrastructure projects in planning, while at the same time investment is possible again now that sanctions have been lifted.

"We're very pleased to see that interest in IranConMin has kept up, with visitor and exhibitor figures staying at the high level of the previous year. Foreign companies are seeing the enormous potential offered by the Iranian market and the trade fair's excellent progress in terms of quality. A lot of people came back this year to continue to pursue burgeoning business relations," says Peter Bergleiter, Managing Director of IMAG GmbH, which organizes IranConMin in collaboration with its partners Palar Samaneh Co. and IranMineHouse.

The next trade fair is from 2 - 5 November 2018.
